We speak the same language

"We work in a very particular area of the project and so having someone who speaks our language, who understands interior works, is such a benefit."

MB92 Interiors Department

"The interiors team all come from an interior design background which is so beneficial to me and the project."

No grey areas

“With interiors, an owner’s scope is only limited by their imagination. This is where it is so important to avoid any ambiguity when defining the scope and the possibilities to deliver this for the client.”

Agile and honest communication

“As always in refit, the real value of experience comes to the fore when challenges present themselves. As Project Managers, our role is to always have a solution, to give options. Therefore, having someone on hand who is able to provide agile responses to proposals is a real added value for us and the client.”

Experience and composure

“The ability to effectively convey calmness is so valuable in such a high-pressure environment as any escalation of unnecessary stress can lead to a domino effect that may jeopardise the success of the project, and then nobody leaves happy.”
